

Creating A Strategy For Healthcare Reform

Human Capital Can Assist With Multi-Level Insurance Plans

Seldom has there ever been one issue which impacted the entire healthcare industry regardless of specialty, size, or geography. In 2014, this issue will arrive in the form of the ACA-Affordable Care Act--- AKA: Healthcare Reform. This is the topic of the day for practice managers and HR directors alike. Aside from questions without answers, confusion seems to be the common denominator in the discussion.

At Human Capital, we began assembling the pieces to the healthcare reform puzzle more than two years ago. We have been working on the “What Ifs”, evaluating the facts, and developing various strategies for our clients. Regardless of size and number of employees, we have been building a framework of options in preparation for any edict. We do know that government will be dictating policy on healthcare and will determine how it is managed at every level.

In the fall of 2012, we surveyed health practitioners in several states and learned that 80% of this group did not thoroughly understand the healthcare reform issue, nor did they understand their responsibilities beginning in 2014. We also found that almost 90% of respondents had no plan nor were they thinking about a strategy at this point.
